For some reason I was expecting the large black box (the packaging) to contain two smaller boxes of cards. It doesn't. Instead, the black box is actually a sturdy cardboard tray with a lift-off lid and two loose decks inside separated by a cardboard divider. Also, product photo made me think there's a clear plastic window to reveal the decks inside but it's actually a photo of the cards printed on black cardboard. Overall the packaging feels and looks nice but it means both decks have to be stored together. If you want to separate the decks (i.e. put one in a kitchen drawer and one in a game room), you would have to take one deck out of the box and put a rubber band around it. The cards themselves are decent. They are not stiff and glossy like Bicycle cards. They feel a tad thinner and have a matte (unglossy) feel. My first impression was, "Oh, these aren't quite as good a quality as Bicycle" but then I started fiddling with them and realized they are actually less slippery and have a hint of "grip" to them, which I think is actually a plus that makes them better. I'm looking forward to playing a game with them.

Great 2 decks of cards. They feel good, can't wait to try them out. Nice thickness and feels durable. If you want to gift this, I highly recommend you open it up and wash the cards. Out of the box, there is a moderately strong plastic/chemical smell. After washing them, the smell has decreased significantly; hope it goes away with time. Three defects to note: Blue deck, 2 slight misprints: ink rip on the 9 of hearts, and misalignment on the jack of hearts. Red deck, 1 slight misprint: ink smear on the 5 of spades. See pictures. I would subtract a star for the smell; but, the price at $7.50 is five stars.

Nice pair of plastic playing cards. I prefer plastic because they wear better. Some people don't like how plastic cards feel and shuffle, but I've got an automatic shuffler.

These cards are plastic, but they chipped very easily. After two games, 3 cards were marked from chips. I just opened the 2nd deck, and I don't expect them to last long. I'll get a different brand the next time and not waste my money.

Good plastic playing cards. Size is small but good to hold in hand.

I use a card shuffler since I have arthritis and play a game using four decks. These cards produce no dust. They are a bit thicker than the regular cards but hold up well on a cruise with high humidity.
