Prayers Of Honoring

Synopsis

Prayers of Honoring was written for sharing from the heart with others during vital times. In western culture, we keep too many things to ourselves. Prayer, among other things, has become a private practice for those of us who don't congregate for spiritual purposes. Our language for connection to something greater than ourselves has become truncated to basic iterations and generalized affirmations. Perhaps this is so that no one will be offended by our approach, or so our spiritual personalities- who we are when we talk to and reach for God- can remain under a cloak of mystery and intrigue. Maybe it has something to do with our collective intolerance for vulnerability. Prayers of Honoring is an expression of creative, environmental, energetic and spiritual possibilities. When we're open to receive the heart's intelligence, we offer acceptance to ourselves and others and shift our patterns of isolation and loneliness. The challenge is to share ourselves and our words without fearing we're doing it wrong. Prayer is very much still a sullied concept. To some ears, the word "prayer" results in triggersome memories whether personal or cultural/collective. The bitter taste of yesterday's experiences of over-organized religions, forced practice, penance, rigid disciplines bearing harsh consequences, and heavy-handed authorities on the laws of God, leave little room for welcoming prayer back into the heart, home and psyche. Prayers of Honoring can help an individual overcome prayer trauma and begin to speak the words of spirit from the heart out loud again.

Prayers of Honoring is my first book. It gestated for a year before I began to compile the poem-like prayers into a collection for sharing with others. They are very personal to me and also universal in their application. My inspiration for writing the book was to create a portable compendium of friends to call on for almost any occasion. Each prayer is connected to a cycle of life, a transient place we visit when our experiences find us at the crossroads. I wrote them to honor that which is seldom celebrated: those intimate moments in nature which mirror our human experiences. I wrote Prayers of Honoring because I wanted to restore faith in the reader's dialogue with the Source of Life As He or She Understands It. The natural world is my altar and the spirit energy which lives between the cells of every living thing is what I am in awe of. I hope you're inspired to read the prayers and add your own thoughts on the lined pages provided. There are also journal prompts to help you find your spirit reflected in the natural world around you.

Pixie Lighthorse builds circles of women and families to celebrate the gifts of the natural world in community. Her programs bring Earth Medicine skills and feminine ritual to everyday experiences of parenting, creative process and business with an emphasis on developing an ongoing relationship with Great Mystery. Pixie lives on a ranch in Oregon with her cowboy king and two wild children, When she's not writing and gathering with women, she's painting animal spirits, restoring health to the land she shares with the wild creatures and singing sacred songs to all living things under the moon.
