Souls is the second book following Cora and Echo. Cora is helping souls find their peace, finally finding her place in the supernatural world. When a dark soul, Dev, comes to her for help, she notices immediately that he is different from the rest; he purposely came to find her in order to try to get in touch with Echo. Many Griminirs want Dev, but Cora tries to follow her instincts to protect him, even against Echo's wishes. Cora starts to have trouble balancing her school-life, helping souls, keeping her parents in the dark, and still keeping Echo happy. She must try to find a balance between all of them before she ends up over her head in something she cannot control. This gives us a deeper insight to Cora as she is trying to expand her knowledge of the world, and do her best to give back to the souls. The author does a great job divulging more into Cora's character and intertwining the characters' pasts with the present. I have read many books that have made many basic mistakes when doing this, but she seems to have been able to keep their storylines straight and following through with their crossings.

This is the 4th book in the series, but the 2nd book that follows primarily Cora and Echo. Once again their chemistry could make the devil blush! In this book Cora has decided to use her new found ability to see souls for good. She decides to help souls get closure with the loved ones they left behind, but she quickly realizes not all souls are content to state their unfinished business and move on to their afterlife. Some decide she would make a nice home.....permanently. She must figure out who is after her, but she also has a boyfriend and best friend who desperately need her as their worlds start to crumble. Can she be their rock and protect herself, or will she sacrifice herself for those she loves and the souls she vowed to help? This book is spicy like only Cora and Echo can be, but it's also heartbreaking and beautiful as Cora helps souls with their unfinished business. You wont be disappointed with this one!

This is Cora's story and a great one at that. Cora is an immortal and with her badass boyfriend, Echo, works with the other immortals to keep people safe. Actually, Cora helps ghosts get closure and move on. She lets them possess her so they can speak to loved ones and thus ending their walk on earth. Echo escorts souls to Hel's holding chambers. An old friend Devlin contacts Cora because he needs Echo to hear him out. There is bad blood between them, all over a misunderstanding. Dev is determined to help them and does best to convince Echo of his innocence. Feminist, Valkeries and Norns all find their way into the lives of Cora and Echo. Bad things happen, memories are erased again and Torin and Raine deal with massive problems. But who will prevail?? THEY are coming and in great numbers. Can this small group of fighters win?? Read on to find all of those answers and more. I love this series and this author is fantastic. Become one with the characters. You'll love it.

<http://functioninginsanity.blogspot.com/2014/10/more-cora-and-echo-in-souls-by-ednah.html> Now down to the goodies which will contain spoilers from the previous books in the series so if you're not caught up yet go read them and come back. You've been warned. So we left off after a bit of a battle royal in the forest with the Valkyries and the evil Immortals. Well Cora is still doing her thing in helping souls find closure, even though her sexy soul reaper boyfriend Echo doesn't always like the toll it takes on her. Still he is a good boyfriend and is her perfect partner in this as he reaps the souls after she finishes. That is until she meets with a dark soul. Yep, and not just some twisted psycho but something much darker. Now Echo wants her to stop. She is caught between what she feels is right and what Echo wants from her. Add to that the other reapers trying to track this dark soul down and you have a mess. Even her Valkyrie friends don't understand why she would ever help a dark soul. Cora feels there is more to it than she's been told and that this dark soul may be the key to stopping a much more sinister plot against her and her friends. As I mentioned I love me some Cora and Echo. He is such a good guy bad boy. He is a reaper, one of Hel's best, and he is very confident in himself but when he's with Cora he's different. I enjoy watching the different interactions with him and seeing how Cora interrupts him. She knows how it would look to others and what she has given up to be with him but she doesn't care. Some things she still has her moments on, come on what girl wouldn't like a boyfriend to take her out in public ever once in a while. Still reading them together even when they don't agree, because lets face it they're both stubborn. Its swoon worthy. His need for her comes through and makes me want to warm him up after his trips to Hel. And Cora, she has grown a lot over the series. She was all hot guy of the week blog but now she has seen what's really out there and wants to help people. She isn't the type to sit back and let her supernatural boyfriend do all the work, she wants to contribute too. So she helps souls even when it takes a toll on her. She is a strong character who takes what is given to her and rolls with it the best way she can. At the same time she is totally mushy and in love with her guy even though she hates being 'that girl' sometimes. Though I would never classify Cora as a girl who needs her guy to be complete, I simply think that what they have makes them both stronger and it's okay to need/want that. We've covered their chemistry. Scorching. Echo has also grown since we first met him and although he doesn't care to have a ton of people around he is slowly coming out of his solitary life. He has friends now even if no one will admit it. Cora is good for him in that way, she loves him and their time together but she isn't given up her friends and family to spend every second with him but instead pulls him into it. Even if he doesn't always make it easy or play fair. I also liked that in this one we got more of Raine, Torin, and the gang. Cora's relationship with Echo is great but we also see more of her with Raine. They had been friends for years and we see that closeness in here. I could easily see their relationship, not many words needed to discuss something, just needing a hug, and always standing by one another in any situation. Also unlike Raine, Cora has to do all this supernatural stuff without her parents knowing which means lies and cover stories. That can't be easy for when you have a good and close relationship with your parents like she has. And I love that the author didn't just shove that aside either and made it clear. Oh the feels. I won't say when, if you haven't read this book, but there were a couple of scenes where it pulled on my heart strings and gave me a serious case of the feels where I had to stop reading for a bit and do something else. Hey I was at work and I refuse to cry because of a book at work; the guys would never let me live it down and I'd scare people away if they came to the window. So keep tissues handy. Not just Cora/Echo hotness, or tears, there was a lot of action going on between the fighting and the mystery to solve. We also learn more about the marks put on Cora that make her soul cat nip. It also left plenty of questions unanswered that I hope will come up in the next book. The stories really do line up perfectly and I can't wait to see what happens next in Witches in December. With all this, if it wasn't clear I give Souls 5 Apple Pies. Anyways Souls came out September 29th so check it and the other books in the Runes and Grimoirs series out.
